Town is a teeming metropolis. You sense it in flashes and splashes of colour as you move through its grey alleys and streets and malls: the college campus where young women and men study hard, party hard and maybe tonight die hard as Big D mixes up a magic powder laced with something lethal; the old jail where convicts were once hanged, where you can attend therapy on the dingwing or plan to bail out in the heat of a riot; the local library where poetic love stories begin. It's all here. Come and walk the walks and lanes and sidestreets with us. It may look kinda familiar – but it's scary and weird and only love can keep this town together anymore.
